Annual Report 2018

Letter from the Board President

American Novelist Herman Melville recognized, “We cannot live for ourselves alone. Our lives are connected by a thousand invisible threads.” Melville acknowledged what we all implicitly know. The actions each one of us takes affect other people who, in turn, respond in ways that impact us. We are all in this together. As a community we are much stronger when we recognize the threads of our common humanity and work together with one another to achieve solutions.

At Center for Youth and Family Solutions, that’s exactly what we do. We work together. Throughout our programs we connect helping professionals with families, children with their foster parents, teenagers with therapists, seniors with supportive volunteers, and staff with agency, governing board, and community. The common thread that runs through all of our services is our commitment to achieve solutions together.

Life is difficult for many people. The trauma of abuse, the deprivation of neglect, the bleakness of depression, the loneliness of grief, the disruption of family crisis – these are some of the challenges that bring people to CYFS. In response, we provide the necessary tools and support for healing, to help people learn new skills, and to link them to the life-enhancing resources necessary to achieve a better future.

As Board President, I feel privileged to share with you the successes achieved by the staff and clients of The Center for Youth and Family Solutions as they worked together during Fiscal Year 2018. When you review this year’s annual report, note the numerous ways your support helped to bring critical assistance to families in crisis, to ensure the well-being of children in foster care, and to facilitate seniors living independently.

We are pleased with our efforts to keep families together. The Intact Family Program provides intensive intervention to help families provide their own children a safe and loving home as an alternative to placement in foster care - 85.93% of families successfully completed this program and 96% of those are still doing well a year later. Keeping families together makes sense emotionally, and it’s cost effective too. Stronger families mean stronger communities.

CYFS is successful in championing independence - 99% of seniors served by our New Day program continue to live independently. New Day provides in-home counseling and volunteer companion services to older adults who face loss, depression, and social isolation. We are also proud of our accomplishments in stabilizing families and communities - 100% of youth served in our Crisis Intervention Program moved off the streets and returned to a safer living environment.

These are only a few salient examples of the impact of CYFS. I invite you to look closely at the next several pages to see how each of our programs contributes substantially to individual, family, and community well-being. We are making a difference. But, we are not doing it alone.

We value your support of our mission. It takes a community. Thank you for being part of the CYFS community as we work to achieve solutions together.

Respectfully,

Michael O'Melia
CYFS Board President
