Cellular Telephone Text Messaging Authorization

The Center for Youth and Family Solutions recognizes that text messaging can be a convenient and productive means of communication. The staff at the Center for Youth and Family Solutions will only use texting to communicate with you when you have given your consent, and only for non-confidential correspondence. It is not the intention of The Center for Youth and Family Solutions that texting be a substitute for in-person communication or written correspondence required to provide quality services to you or your family.

I, _____, authorize The Center for Youth and Family Solutions' employee(s) and supervisor(s) providing services to me to transmit text messages via cellular telephone with me.

I acknowledge that there is minimal risk that the information in text messages may be accessible to others and as such any information sent via text should avoid private/confidential information.
